Aluminum foil wrap for print butter is regarded as greatly superior to the conventional parchment wrap.

The new aluminum foil wrap, developed recently in Canada and the U.S., consists of a .00045 aluminum foil treated with a protective coating to prevent pitting and corrosion from brine and is laminated to a light weight vegetable parchment. In Science Service studies, the wrap proved advantageous. Stored at 40 degrees and 60 degrees F. for 28 days, print butter maintained better flavor, showed less loss of weight and retained the color better. The foil also inhibited absorption of odors and flavors from fruits and vegetables and gave protection from light even when the butter was exposed to direct sunlight.

The aluminum wrap can be embossed and printed in various colors, makes an attractive package when neatly wrapped and has been handled by automatic packaging equipment.

$175 MILLION GRANTED U.K. TO BUY WHEAT IN CANADA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The Economic Co-operation Administration today approved the use by Great Britain of $175,000,000 in Marshall Plan funds to buy Canadian wheat.

The recovery agency said the action is "an effort to alleviate the critical drain on British gold and dollar holdings."

Easing of restrictions on British use of Marshall Plan money was one of the things agreed to at the British-Canadian-American talks on Britain's dollar crisis.

The wheat purchase is the first approved by EAC from any source other than the United States since last March.

Wheat purchases from other countries with Marshall Plan money were suspended at that time because grain was in full supply in the U.S.

CBC Wednesday Night on October 12 will present from Toronto to the Canadian Premiere and the first special production of the opera "Peter Grimes" by the young English composer, Benjamin Britten. The music advisor to the CBC, Geoffrey Waddington, (inset) will conduct the performance, which will be produced by Terence Gibbs. Solo parts will be taken by five Toronto singers—Frances James, Wm. Morton, Edmund Hockridge, Eric Tredwell and Gordon Wry. "Peter Grimes" is the personal story of an ill-fated fisherman.

One Second From Eternity

A railroad engineer looked back on the moment when his locomotive barely missed crashing into a car at a crossing at Fremont, Neb., and wrote the following open letter to the "youth and his girl" who were passengers in the automobile.

It's good advice for those bent on taking chances with trains:

"I don't know who you are, it's true, but I do know you were scared to death Sunday evening near 9 o'clock when you drove your car directly in front of a speeding passenger train. It was so close that I, in the cab, could see the young girl (your sweetheart, I presume) throw her hands up in front of her face and cringe up against you in stark horror.

"If I were that young girl I'd pull away from you fast. You don't have good sense, son. You probably say you love her. I wonder. Those we love we try to protect. But not you.

"Wouldn't that have been a nice Christmas present to hand your mother—a broken and battered body. And how do you think that we in the cab of that engine would feel. We are human beings, too. We have young ones waiting home for us to return. We, too, could have been killed.

"You and your girl were one second from eternity, Sunday, son.

"I hope you read this and know it means you, and that your girl will, too. Next time you go driving around, stop and look. We don't want to hit you but we are helpless, as we cannot swerve away from our given rail.

"If I were you, son, and you, too, sis, I'd thank God for that split second He granted you Sunday evening.

"I said a prayer for all when I realized you were going across. Perhaps that's what saved us all.

"Now think it over, both of you, And I'll bet you are both shaking in your shoes.

"And please, for God's sake, don't try it again."

The letter was written by Chester E. Beltz, a railway engineer.

371 MILLION BUSHELS SEEN AS WHEAT CROP

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—The Bureau of Statistics today estimated Canada's 1949 wheat crop at 371,600,000 bushels, down 20,000,000 from the first preliminary estimate made a month ago.

Canada's wheat production in 1948 was 393,345,000 bushels. The Bureau said sudden hot weather over the prairies caused deterioration, accounting for the lower figure in today's second estimate of Canadian grain production.

Spring Wheat

Spring wheat production on the prairies is expected to amount to 347,494,000 bushels, compared with the 352,000,000 bushels estimated last month and the 367,332,000 bushels produced last year.

A slightly higher estimate was made for oats now expected to total 322,017,000 bushels, compared with 317,000,000 bushels estimated last month, but lower than the 358,807,000 bushels produced a year ago.

Down from the August estimate of 126,500,000 bushels, barley production this year is expected to total 125,089,000 bushels. This compares with 155,018,000 bushels produced in 1948.

The "Means Test" As Applied To The Old Age Pensions

The "Means Test" is briefly and simply taking account of the applicant's income and assets in order to determine that portion of the maximum pension to which he or she may be entitled. Eligibility for pension is determined by an act passed by the dominion government and restrictions which are so often subject to criticism are contained in the act itself. In the application of the "Means Test," for example, a single pensioner may own his or her own small home as long as it is used exclusively as the residence of the pensioner. In addition, he or she may have other assets valued at approximately $2,000 and still be eligible for the maximum old age pension. If rent is received from the home in addition to the assets mentioned, the pension is reduced accordingly.

A married couple living in their own home may have additional assets of $6,000 where only one of them is eligible for pension, but if they receive rents from the home or have other means such as superannuation, a reduced pension may be paid. If a couple are both eligible for pension they may enjoy exclusive use of their dwelling and possess additional assets of approximately $3,000 without reduction of maximum pension for both. However, the amount may be reduced in such case if they have additional means.

Transfer Property

There have been cases where applicants for pensions have transferred considerable property to someone else in order to qualify for the full amount. The practice naturally is frowned upon by pension authorities. To check it, regulations provide that where an applicant or his spouse has made an assignment or transfer of property exceeding $500 in value within five years preceding the date of the application complete information concerning the deal must be furnished. All such transfers are presumed to have been made in order to qualify for the pension unless evidence proving the contrary is submitted to the board.

There are some who believe that the government takes property away from pensioners. This is not true. Pensioners may enjoy the use of their property as outlined above during their lives and it may be left by will to the spouse after the death of the pensioner. Further, upon the death of the pensioner or his spouse $2,000 of the estate may be willed to any relative. The government may file a claim upon whatever there may be over the $2,000, but if any person has helped take care of the pensioner, such a person is considered to have as good and perhaps a better claim on the estate than the government. In these cases the pension board usually waives its claim to the estate.

The Menace Of Fire

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES ARE AN ever-present menace to life and property. Each year scores of homes, places of business, hotels and other structures are destroyed by fire, and many lives are lost. Figures compiled by the Dominion Fire Commissioner on the loss of life and property caused by fire, show that in 1947 property loss amounted to $57,050,461, or $4.53 per capita. Deaths due to fire in the same year numbered 390. In addition to the damage to life and property by fire each year in Canada, there is serious waste of one of our most valuable natural resources, the forests. It is estimated by the Canadian Forestry Association that nearly one million acres of our forest lands have been burned over this year, and such losses are an almost annual occurrence.

A Danger To Our Forests

The great forest fires which break out almost every year not only destroy valuable trees, but in many cases also destroy the topsoil which is equally valuable and in addition, is irreplaceable. In preventing and fighting forest fires, Canada has a great problem and one which involves one of our richest natural resources. Great areas of Canadian forests are in remote regions and are inaccessible because of lack of roads or because of the nature of the land. Another factor which adds to the difficulty of controlling forest fires here is the presence of many coniferous trees, which burn easily. For these and other reasons Canadian forests are very vulnerable to fire, and as yet no way has been found here, or in other countries, to check extensive forest fires.

Difficult To Fight Fires

Forest conservation staffs do excellent work in preventing forest fires and in controlling those which do break out. They also fight fires with the means which are now available, but the problem of getting equipment to the area where it is needed is often difficult or impossible. Those directly concerned with this problem are of the opinion that great efforts should be made to find ways to combat this annual destruction of our forests. The Canadian Society of Forest Engineers has suggested that the National Research Council should be asked to assist and that the Department of National Defence might also be asked to help, since the setting of forest fires by enemy action is a recognized danger in time of war. The losses of life, property, and our forest wealth by fire each year are serious, and the public should lend every support to efforts which are made to reduce this waste and destruction.

The Association asked Calgary city council to raise $15,000, explaining that "The Provincial Government has turned down our request for help—they ought to be told by someone that they must subscribe—Alberta cannot expect the rest of the country to carry their load."

New Alberta Industry Seen

MONTREAL.—The combination of low-cost power sources with abundant chemical resources means that Alberta eventually will support a large and important chemical industry, J. R. Donald of Montreal told the Montreal regional conference of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

"Because of the abundant low-cost natural gas, it seems probable that Alberta will, in the future, provide some of the chemical needs of Eastern Canada. In addition to ammonia, such chemicals as methanol and urea as well as the chlorinated hydrocarbons should be produced substantially cheaper in Alberta."

DARLINGTON, Man.—Explorer La Verendrye's trip through this area in 1738 will be commemorated by a bronze plaque to be erected east of here. The explorer is reported to have travelled from Portage la Prairie (then Fort la Reine) south and southwest on his way to the Missouri River.

He Started Something

It was Jim Greenblatt, editor of The Sun in Swift Current, Saskatchewan, who started the subject of dull wedding write-ups. In his front page column recently he asked for some reader suggestions on how to improve wedding write-ups and in a harassed letter warned Margaret Aitken in the Toronto Telegram to stay out of the controversy.

"Take my advice," warns Mr. Greenblatt, "don't get embroiled in this subject. My social editor, plus the rest of this editorial staff really got into hot water."

It seems one of The Sun's correspondents took editor Greenblatt at his word and wrote a different wedding write-up, with accent on the groom. "The whole column has taken sides in the matter, most of them holding the write-up was okay, but since then we have been getting letters galore on the subject, and would that I had never started it," moans Mr. Greenblatt.

Here, in part, is how the "different" wedding write-up appeared in print:

"To the strains of the wedding march, the groom entered the church on the arm of the best man. "The bridegroom, who blushed prettily, was attractively attired in a three-piece suit consisting of coat, vest and pants. The coat was decorated with a white carnation in the left buttonhole. The pants, which were worn with an air as if the groom suspected it would be the last time he wore the pants, as the saying goes, looked very neat for the occasion. The vest, which was closed in front with matching buttons, was sleeveless. It was gathered in the back with a buckle and was fashioned with small pockets."

There's considerably more in like vein about the groom and about his best man. The bride's appearance is summed up in little more than a dozen words.

"The bride, gowned in a white brocaded nylon floor-length gown fashioned with a hoop skirt and net yoke, carried a bouquet of red roses. "The groom's mother," editor Greenblatt told me sadly, "came up to my office boiling, and I do mean boiling." He has decided The Sun will go back to the old hackneyed wedding write-ups!

Expect Oil To Flow To Great Lakes In 1951

CALGARY. — Dr. O. B. Hopkins, vice-president of Imperial Oil and H. H. Hewelson, chairman of the board, revealed here that the 450-mile pipeline from Edmonton to Regina is definitely being extended to the head of the lakes, an additional 700 miles, and will be routed through the sedimentary area. It was also indicated the company is currently contemplating its extended route to run through to Superior, Wisconsin.

The line, originally planned to run from Edmonton to Regina on basis of a 10-inch pipe, was increased to 12 inches and then 16 inches in diameter. Then further enlargements in plans were made as oil resources expanded, which finally ended up with a 20-inch line from Edmonton to Regina, 16-inch line from Regina to Regina, Manitoba, and an 18-inch line from Regina to the head of the lakes.

Estimated cost of this project was placed by Mr. Hewelson at $80 millions. It is believed that Imperial will be

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

FRESH AIR

By MICHAEL TIFF

"THERE'S anything I hate," muttered Bud McDaniel, "it's swinging this pick."

"It's the smart guys that get real pick out of life," said Tim Lafferty. "Dumb galoots like us sweat our heads off for pennies and what we call three squares."

Bud threw down his pick. "We're thinking the same. Let's eat."

Climbing out of the ditch, they opened their baskets and began to wolf their sandwiches. As Bud reached on an apple, a torn portion of a newspaper was blown against him. "What you reading?" asked his friend, picking his teeth and lying on his back in the sun.

"Listen to this," said Bud. "Says here, 'Not satisfied with a new plane, Clarence Dunne bought a motorboat and took long rides up the Hudson. That guy sure is one of those smart ones we were talking about.'"

"What's the headline?" asked Tim. "That part's torn away. But here's some more. 'Clarence became known as Playboy Number One along the Big Stem. There wasn't a night club he didn't visit. When he stepped out with the chorines, he left a trail of dollars behind him.' Can you imagine a guy like that?" Bud looked up from the paper. "He knew how to enjoy life. Catch him going miles near a pick."

"Wish I was in his boots. Any more?"

"Yep. It says here, 'Clarence stopped only at the classiest hotels and gave the bell-boys fifty dollars apiece. He invited the prettiest girls to his parties and the champagne ran free as a waterfall. With Clarence there wasn't any limit. His philosophy was to have a rip-roaring time while you could. He bought diamonds and rubies for his favorites. And he liked his food.' Bud looked up. "Get that, Tim? This guy likes his eats."

Tim sat up. "Go on, read more. I bet he ate like a king, eh?"

"Bet he did. Well, it says here, 'Clarence was a modern Jim Brady, if there ever was one. He had the best meals, salads and sauces in the hotels. He ate three times as much as the average man. He considered eating, like other good things in life, something to take advantage of and enjoy.' Why else did a man live?"

Bud stopped reading, glanced at his friend and sighed. "Boy, he sure did have the right slant," said Tim. "Why, I'd call him the smartest man that ever breathed."

"Only fools like us work like slaves and for what? Some beef sandwiches and a hard bed to sleep in. And my wife, Ann. What does she get out of it? Why, Clarence Dunne had something to offer a girl." Bud turned the paper around. "Look, there's more on this side. Says, 'Clarence Dunne laughed when reporters asked him whether he liked to work.'"

"Work," said Clarence with a knowing wink. "What do you take me for? I tried work once. I didn't take to it or maybe it didn't take to me."

"Bud, after hearing about Clarence, I'll be hanged if I care to go back to that ditch with the other bohunks."

"Tim, it's about time we wised up. Get smart. Look, Tim, here's a guy that woke up one day and used his brains to get himself together a pile. After that he just went out and spent it."

The other men were rubbing their sleepy eyes and putting their lunch kits in order. Soon the afternoon shift would begin, four hours of sweating and straining.

"Anything more about this Clarence guy?" inquired Tim hopefully. "Just a few more words down here at the bottom." Bud concentrated upon the left of paper before the signal from the foreman would end their rest. "It says, 'Clarence remained quite calm and at ease as he was led away by the police—hey, what's this about the police?'" Bud leaned closer to the ground and Tim stooped forward, his ears cocked.

"Go on, read, Bud."

"To the cell which will be Clarence Dunne's home for the next 20 years—the total sentence for the series of bank robberies."

Bud and Tim exchanged silent glances. Then they picked up their tools and went back to the ditch. "Feels good swinging this pick," said Bud.

"And plenty o' nice fresh air," said Tim. (Copyright Wheeler Newspaper Syndicate)

Your Hometown . . .

YOUR HOMETOWN . . . Where a lot of people made a big fuss over it when you were born . . . Where you spent a few people every time you meet them on the street, even if it's a half dozen times a day . . . Where you know more people than you don't know and like almost all of them . . . Where your friends live, and you walk in daily security with the knowledge that they'll come to bat for you if you need them . . . Where people ask, "How are you?" and care . . . Where everybody is interested in what's your own darned business . . . Where you know every crack in the streets you've walked, littered with blowing autumn leaves, covered with the swirling snows of winter, and glazed with fresh spring rains . . . Where Market street in a fog has reminded you of London lanes . . . Where Fourth street has felt as good as Paris in the spring . . . Where you have thought of the stappes of Holy Russia, walking down a Broadway covered with soft falling snow . . . Where humid summer nights have been all of the tropics you'll ever know . . . Where a lot of porches here and there in the residential districts remind you of long-gone romances . . . Where you have played, gone to school, worked, dreamed, suffered, been happy, and looked up to the sky at the universe and eternity, and where a lot of people will make a big fuss over it when you die.—Daniel Francis Clancy.

Cold Storage Chain Across Prairies Planned

VANCOUVER—A Vancouver firm is undertaking "immediately" establishment of a cold storage chain across the Prairies for distribution of British Columbia fruits and fish.

B.C. Ice & Cold Storage Ltd., which operates a large cold storage plant on Vancouver's waterfront, has announced plans for a $4-million investment in cold storage outlets east of the Rockies for produce it now handles locally. Officials expect the branch plants will be ready for the 1950 crop.

Richard J. Grosse, managing director said in the company announcement: "The selling season can be spread over a much greater period if we can supply storage facilities at Prairie centres. Growers should be freed from the gamble of the crates fresh fruit deal and assured a sustained selling period for their products at times convenient to the housewife."
